ENTHUSIASM BUBBLED, FLOWED, THEN OVERSPREAD BUSINESS MEN

Special Meeting For Wednesday Night
Was Arranged at the Session of Retail Merchants' Association.

MANY PLANS WERE SUGGESTED

Executive and Manufacturing Committee to Report Plan For Raising Permanent Factory Fund.

SUGGESTION FOR ADVERTISING

Members Made Many Enthusiastic Speeches All Looking Toward Betterment of Rushville.

Enthusiasm and original ideas for the betterment of Rushville overflowed, bubbled over and overspread all of the business men who attended the regular bi-monthly meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association in the court house last night. About thirty-five business men were present and formed a nucleus for greater things later. If enthusiasm and "ginger" amount to anything, the session last night is bound to reap results, as more of that was manifest than at any other two or three meetings which have been held previously. Many members of the association arose to their feet and voiced their sentiments and were loudly applauded for it. Applause was not an uncommon thing and came usually after each enthusiastic speech.

Probably the most important thing accomplished was the formulation of a definite arrangement whereby a plan would be originated for the foundation of a factory fund. It was unanimously agreed that a special meeting would be held next Wednesday evening, when the members would hear a special report from a combined meeting of the executive and the manufacturing committees. The two committees will hold a meeting together before next Wednesday night and agree upon a plan for the raising of a permanent factory fund. The plan will be presented to the meeting next Wednesday night and either rejected, accepted or amended by the members. It is urged that every business man in the city make a special effort to be present at that session.

Among other things last night many ideas for the advertising of Rushville, as a business center were suggested. Several members of the association were not afraid to express original ideas for advertising. Jet Parker, as chairman of the press committee, in a short speech asked for ideas for combined advertising of the local merchants through the association. He asked if the merchants would not suggest or at least listen to some plan for circular advertising. He believed that a circular of some sort sent through the county, on which each member of the association was represented, would not only advertise the merchants, but would bring more trade to this center.

A long discussion was held on the subject of advertising with many ideas expressed. By a unanimous vote of the meeting, it was decided to refer the matter to the press committee for their consideration and with the instruction to formulate some plan, which will be presented at the next meeting. It was later agreed that if the committee, after canvassing the business men, found a suitable plan upon which all agreed, they should go ahead and carry it out without presenting it to the association for their passing or rejection.

The meeting was called to order shortly after eight o'clock with about twenty members present and a minor portion of the officers and board of directors present. Within the next hour about fifteen more members joined the meeting and swelled the number to thirty-five. The minutes of the last meeting were read and two printing bills were allowed. The report of the press committee was read. It showed that the committee had been putting in some hard licks for the good of the cause. Two members of the committee within the last two weeks canvassed all of the retail men and manufacturers in the city and took their envelopes to the print shop. There they were decorated on the back with a few well worded sentences, setting forth the advantages of Rushville as a factory and trading center. The report showed that over eighteen thousand envelopes had been printed.

F. E. Wolcott, secretary of the association, urged upon the members the necessity of filling out the credit blanks with which every member had been supplied. He emphasized the fact that the system of handling the "dead heads" would be a failure if every merchant did not take an interest in the matter, fill out the blanks and hand them in to the secretary. He said that the blanks had been delivered to every member and asked that they turn them in a few at a time, until they had covered their accounts.

In connection with the filing of the credit blanks with the secretary, the question of hiring an assistant secretary came up. It was suggested by Mr. Parker that steps be taken in that direction as the secretary did not have the time to handle all of the business which would necessarily come up. The secretary said that he had talked with Guy Abercrombie who had signified his willingness of assisting in the work for a nominal sum which would allow him to hire a stenographer. It was also suggested that the Abercrombie office could be used as a meeting place for the executive committee to be used at any time. It was decided to leave the matter to the decision of the executive committee.

Lincoln Guffin, as chairman of the committee on manufacturer made a short report. He said that he had talked with local men who had under consideration the organization of a factory in the old Warfield & Wilson building. He said that these men had planned to organize some time later, but were not ready at present. Mr. Guffin explained that it had been the intention of the committee to give first aid to local propositions and now that they were not ready, it was feasible to go ahead with the consideration of outside concerns. He further reported that he had written to Charles Baker, a former resident of Rushville, concerning the factory proposition and had received one letter. That, said Mr. Guffin, was not very specific and he had written again. He said that the committee had as yet received no reply from the Weer automobile company of Dayton, Ohio, in answer to their letter.

During his speech, Mr. Guffin took occasion to mention a recent editorial in the Daily Republican or a eulogy to the association. He felt that it was somewhat in error and that the committee had been unjustly criticised. He hastened to explain, however, that he was not "sore," but that he only had a few words to say in regard to the editorial. Mr. Guffin further hastened to explain and exonerate the committee on manufactures. He said that the committee was organized twelve hours after it has been appointed and that it had been on the job all the time. He said that the committee of which he was chairman was still ready to do anything and were not going to "lay down."

Later during the meeting Mr. Guffin

ATTEMPTS TO KILL EMPLOYER

E. Mulroy of St. Paul Pulls Gun on George Hess But it Fails to Explode.

SLIGHT ENCOUNTER FOLLOWS

In Which Mulroy is Knocked Down—
Two Men Finally Parted as Friends.

Details of some serious trouble that occurred at St. Paul Wednesday night reached this city Thursday, the participants being George Hess, proprietor of a soft drink parlor at that place, and Ed Mulroy, one of his employees. Mulroy made an attempt to kill his employer with a pistol snatched from behind a counter at the store, but murder was averted by the fortunate fact that the cartridges failed to explode, though Mulroy pulled the trigger twice and at a time when pointing the gun directly in the face of his adversary, says the Shelbyville Morning News. Mr. Hess is said to have used his fist so effectively that he felled Mulroy to the floor after which he proceeded to give him a pummeling that put him out of business. The two later shook hands and agreed to be friends but Mulroy decided to quit his job and look for employment elsewhere.

The trouble is said to have started over some very small boys playing box ball at the Hess establishment. Mulroy ordered them out of the place saying that it was a violation of the law for them to be in the house. They appealed to Mr. Hess and his decision that they should remain angered Mulroy and brought on the serious phase of the trouble as he hunted the revolver and was doing his best to use it when felled by Mr. Hess.

The men were separated after a rough and tumble fight. No affidavits have been filed and it is not likely that the men will be arrested as they parted professing friendship for each other.

LOCAL MAN CHOSEN AS TREASURER

Dr. F. M. Sparks Elected an Official at the Closing Session of Indiana State Dental Association.

DENTISTS WILL CENSOR NEWS

With the reading of papers on the care of the teeth of inmates of State institutions and the election of a treasurer, the second annual convention of the Indiana State Dental Association closed yesterday morning, says the Indianapolis Star. During the discussion the statement was made that the State had apparently not recognized the importance of the care of the teeth of those in the various institutions. Dr. E. F. Crowley of Chicago and Dr. E. Laughlin of Evansville led the discussion. F. M. Sparks of Rushville was elected treasurer for the ensuing year. Next year all news given out for publication will have to pass through the hands of official censors. A press committee will be appointed at the first session. The other officers elected the day before are: President, C. D. Lucas, Indianapolis; vice president, C. E. Redmond, Peru; secretary, Otto U. King, Huntington.

TWENTY-TWO TO GRADUATE

Commencement Exercises to be Held at the Main Street Christian Church Next Friday Night.

OTHER EVENTS OF THE WEEK

The Baccalaureate Sermon Will be Preached by the Rev. J. W.
Turner Sunday Evening.

Once more the time of the year rolls around when the high school graduate holds the center of the stage. The members of the local Senior class were wearing the smiles today that only come once in a life time because they entered the school room today for the last time, unless they seek higher education. But they are loath to leave twelve years of pleasant memories without at least a parting farewell.

The commencement exercises will be held in the Main Street Christian church next Friday evening at eight o'clock. The speaker for the occasion will be S. A. Long of Dayton, Ohio. He is recognized as an orator of ability and an intellectual treat may be expected.

The baccalaureate sermon will be preached by the Rev. J. W. Turner, pastor of the St. Paul M. E. church next Sunday evening at the Main Street Christian church. All of the churches in the city will be dark for that occasion. Dr. Turner's subject will be "The Mastery of Mind."

Among the social functions of the commencement week, the closing event, the commencement dance which follows the exercises Friday evening, is the one which most attracts the younger set. The dance has come to be an annual custom which is never overlooked. The dance will be given in the Modern Woodmen hall and the music will be furnished by the Connersville Auditorium orchestra. The managers of the dance plan to decorate the hall for the occasion. The Seniors were entertained by the Juniors Wednesday evening.

The officers of the graduating class this year are: Charles Blake Stiffler, president; Lorene Augusta Smith, vice president; Marie Muire, secretary; Lowell Oliver Norris, treasurer.

There are twenty-two students who will get a diploma from the high school. The class roll is as follows: Blanche Elizabeth Armstrong, Zora Martha Carney, Leona Clark, Byron Stewart Cowing, Ellis Hovey Downey, Florine Deleray Groenier, Ralph Albert Gross, Mary Hall Houchins, Altha Hufford, Rella McBride, Donald Clifford McRoberts, Grace Megee, Hugo Atherton Moffett, Marie Muire, Lowell Oliver Norris, Archie Silvester Roam, Lorene Augusta Smith, Charles Blake Stiffler, Mary Morris Williams, Erema Smith Wilk, Ethel May Young.

Was Scheduled to Pass Through Comet's Tail.

HAS BEEN PLACED ON DISPLAY

A real comet egg with a tail came to life right here in Rushville yesterday on the day that the earth was scheduled to pass through the comet's tail. It was born in a hen's nest at the home of William Hitt in West Third street near Hodges branch and is now on display in the O. P. C. H. clothing store window. A solid egg, just like any ordinary egg, is encased in a soft outer shell with a small amount of fluid of some sort between the outer sack and the inner hard shell. The tail is over an inch long and is exactly in the center of the large end of the egg.

light Robbery Here Yesterday, Bound Over to Circuit Court.

HAD ROBBED A STORE THERE

The three tramps, who boldly entered the Barrett home in North Perkins street yesterday at noon and stole a large quantity of clothing and who were three hours later caught by the Greensburg police as they were about to alight from a Big Four train, are now being held on a charge there. One of the men confessed to the robbery of the Cook store there Tuesday night and implicated the other two. Several knives from the Cook store were found in their possession.

The thieves were bound over to the circuit court on a charge of burglary. They were placed in jail to wait until the June term of court convenes. The clothes taken from the Barrett home were all returned. They gave their names and residences as follows: Charles Henderson, aged 21, of Danville, Ill.; Will Harlow, aged 20 of Indianapolis, and Omer Marion, aged 21, of Indianapolis.

GIPE IS GIVEN HIS FREEDOM

Murderer of Mrs. Mollie Starbuck and Baby is Released From Indiana Reformatory.

WAS SENTENCED IN NOV., 1905

Will be Remembered That Deed Was Very Atrocious One and Attracted Widespread Interest.

Word was received in the circuit court today that Ollie Gipe, who was convicted for manslaughter in 1905, has been released from the Indiana reformatory. He was paroled May 4, 1909, on good behavior and has been out over a year before his final release comes. He was sentenced from two to twenty-one years in the reformatory by Judge Will Sparks on December 22, 1905, for murdering Mollie Starbuck and her baby.

It will be remembered that the Gipe trial attracted widespread interest due to the fact that the deed was very atrocious and that it was not certain that Gipe was the guilty man. The evidence was all circumstantial. The murder occurred near Milton in Henry county and the grand jury of that county returned an indictment for manslaughter.

The trial was held in the Henry circuit court and the jury found Gipe guilty. He was sentenced by the judge. Gipe appealed to the supreme court, where the decision was reversed and the case was sent to the Rush circuit court on a change of venue. The evidence was heard in the November term of the circuit court in 1905. The jury found Gipe guilty and he was sentenced by Judge Sparks.

The evidence in the trial attracted a large crowd to the court room. It was brought out that Mrs. Starbuck the victim, was found in a shallow well with her baby one Saturday night and died the next Monday morning.

INCENDIARY FIRE DESTROYS BARN

Structure on Powell Farm Near Fairview Burned Last Night Entailing Loss of $1,000.

SAVE HORSES AND CARRIAGE

A fire of incendiary origin destroyed the barn on the farm of Michael Powell, living one and one-half miles east of Fairview, last night. The blaze was discovered about 8:30 o'clock and had progressed so far that it was impossible to save anything other than two horses and a carriage. The building was burned to the ground and between two and three hundred bushels of corn, and a large quantity of hay were lost. The total loss is estimated at one thousand dollars. Mr. Powell carried very little insurance on the structure and its contents. The origin of the fire is still a mystery.

If your Stomach, Heart, or Kidney are weak, try at least, a few doses only of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. In five or ten days only, the result will surprise you. A few cents will cover the cost. And here is why help comes so quickly. Dr. Shoop doesn't drug the Stomach, nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes directly to the weak and failing nerves. Each organ has its own controlling nerves. When these nerves fail, the depending organs must of necessity falter. This plain, yet vital truth, clearly tells why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is so universally successful. Its success is leading druggists everywhere to give it universal preference. A test will surely tell. Sold by F. E. Wolcott.

Lesson VIII.—Second Quarter;
For May 22, 1910.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Matt. xiv, 1-12.
Memory Verses, 10-12—Golden Text, Prov. xvi, 32—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

For the present we are asked by the committee to pass by the wonderful thirteenth chapter—why, I know not—but we will return to it in a few weeks and have three lessons in it. Although this lesson today gives an account of the beheading of John the Baptist, the sad event evidently took place some time previous. But now, Herod hearing of the fame of Jesus, his guilty conscience tells him that it is John whom he had murdered. He was perplexed because some said that John was risen from the dead, some said that Elijah had appeared and others that one of the old prophets was risen again. Herod said, "Who is this of whom I hear such things?" And he desired to see him (Luke ix, 7-9). Herod's question, "Who is this?" is an all important one. See also Luke v, 21; vii, 40; Matt. xxi, 10; Isa. lxiii, 1; Jer. xxx, 21, where the question is in connection with the forgiveness of sins, the son of David, the Messiah and the One who is to judge the nations. As our Lord put it to Simon Peter, "Whom say ye that I am?" (Matt. xvi, 15). It should take hold of each one of us, and unless we can from the heart reply as Peter did it will be bad for us. "What is Jesus Christ to me?" is the great question.

In a previous lesson we saw messengers coming to Jesus from John in the prison, but now we have the account of his imprisonment and execution. Herod feared John, knowing him to be a just and holy man, and he heard him gladly and did many things. But Herod had taken his brother Philip's wife and was living with her, and John had told him that it was not lawful. Therefore Herodias had a quarrel (margin, inward grudge) against John and would have killed him, but she could not. But Herod had imprisoned John for Herodias' sake (Mark vi, 17-20). For some idea of what a wicked, unscrupulous woman can do see I Kings xxi, 7-15, and II Kings xi, 1, and consider that Babylon, which is said to be guilty of the blood of all that were slain upon the earth, is compared to a woman arrayed in purple and scarlet and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls (Rev. xvii, 4; xviii, 24). The life of John in prison must have been a sad and lonely one indeed were it not that he had access to God, with whom he had spent so many years in the wilderness. No prison walls can shut out God or the angels, and an eternity of glory will more than compensate for the greatest sufferings of the saints on earth (Rom. viii, 18).

Birthday parties should be happy occasions and innocent affairs, but this one of our lesson was one of the worst on record. It was a great affair, being a supper made by Herod for his lords, high captains and chief estates of Galilee. On this occasion the daughter of the wicked Herodias danced so acceptably to Herod and them that sat with him that Herod promised with an oath to give her whatsoever she would ask. According to Mark (verse 23), "He swore unto her, Whatsoever thou shalt ask of me I will give it thee, unto the half of my kingdom." What an outcome of a drunken revel and a dance! The result of dancing in our times, so often accompanied by drink if not by drunkenness, has never been fully written, but enough has been written to lead thoughtful people to renounce the whole thing and especially the fashionable dancing school. If you care to know, write Dr. Sylvanus Stall of Philadelphia for further information. If the church had a tithe of the zeal of the devil to lead souls astray, how many might by the church be pointed to Him who is able to save from going down to the pit! But where is the zeal referred to in the words, "The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up" (John ii, 17; Ps. lxxix, 9).

The girl went forth and said to her mother, "What shall I ask?" And, being instructed by her mother, she asked for the head of John the Baptist. Quickly it is brought to her, and she carried it to her mother. Did ever a daughter carry or a mother receive so greivous a gift? Yet this is in our day made into a play to entertain thoughtless people. The murder of John meant in due time the murder of Jesus, and the world lying in the wicked one seeks and applauds this kind of entertainment. It is written that the king was sorry, but the sorrow that does not lead to doing right amounts to nothing, and I fear that he has been sorry ever since and will be forever. According to Phil. i, 21, 23, it was a gain to John, a very far better, for he has been well and happy ever since. His disciples took up the body and buried it, but they did not bury John. We never bury people, but only the bodies in which they lived awhile. There shall be a resurrection of all dead bodies, those of the just and the unjust, but there shall be an interval of 1,000 years between (Luke xiv, 14; xx, 35; Acts xxiv, 15; Rev. xx, 5). The disciples of John went and told Jesus. That is the thing to do always and about everything, and then we shall know the peace of God which passeth all understanding (Phil. iv, 6, 7). Then also shall we know what it means to be guided in all things by Him (Prov. iii, 5, 6).

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week
Beginning May 22, 1910.

Topic.—What is it to be a Christian?—Acts xxvi, 24-28. (Union meeting with the Juniors.) Comment by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The question "What is it to be a Christian?" cannot be answered definitely in a single sentence. There are too many phases of the Christian's life; life and labors to make it possible to limit them to what we ordinarily call a definition. Webster defines a Christian "as one who professes or is assumed to believe in the religion of Christ, especially one whose inward and outward life is conformed to the doctrines of Christ." This perhaps is as good a human definition as could be given of a Christian in the abstract.

but when we come to the Scriptures, instead of finding any one statement that defines a Christian, there are simply various descriptions of the characteristics of a disciple of Christ according to the phase of Christianity which Christ or the apostles desired to set forth. What is it to be a Christian may better, therefore, be summed in these characters and especially as illustrated in one who is a Christian—for instance, Paul, the central figure of the scene before us.

In this scene Paul is on trial before King Agrippa and his queen and Festus. Paul had been arrested at Jerusalem, taken to Caesarea, tried before Festus, then Felix, but had appealed to Caesar, a right which as a Roman citizen he possessed. Meanwhile Agrippa came to Caesarea and desired to hear Paul, and he addressed the king, queen and Festus. In this defense we have one of the greatest addresses in the Bible, and it is little wonder that after a conference of the judges Agrippa said to Festus, "This man might have been set at liberty if he had not appealed unto Caesar." Paul had simply told the story of his conversion and subsequent zeal for Christianity. Festus declared he was mad because of his much learning and zeal. Paul denied it and appealed to Agrippa about the prophets and his knowledge of them. Agrippa said unto Paul (A. V.), "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." And Paul said, "I would to God that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost and altogether such as I am except these bonds."

What did Paul mean by "such as I am?" He could only mean one thing—a Christian. Paul was a Christian, and in him and his life we see the characteristics of a true Christian.

1. Paul was converted. On his way to Damascus to persecute Christians he saw Christ in a vision and accepted Him as his Saviour. He was not a Christian in the sense that he tried to reform himself by taking Christ as his example. He was inwardly changed by the power of the Holy Ghost. So must every one be who really is a Christian. Regeneration, not reformation by attempted personal efforts, makes a Christian.

2. Paul possessed the spirit of Christ. "I am crucified with Christ. Nevertheless I live. Yet not I, but Christ, liveth in me." This is an absolute essential of a Christian. "He that hath not the spirit of Christ is none of His." The spirit of Christ does not simply mean an inward desire to follow Christ. Christ must through His spirit dwell in us. "Abide in me and I in you." We must be such as Paul was when he said, "Christ liveth in me."

3. Paul's outward life conformed to that of Christ. This necessarily follows the inward possession of Christ. The inward life determines the outward life. If Christ lives in us, if His mind is our mind, His will is our will, we must be like Him in life and character.

4. Paul accepted and believed the great doctrines concerning Christ—His deity, His crucifixion, His resurrection and ascension, His miracles and the doctrine of the atonement in the sense of substitution. He gloried only in the cross and boldly proclaimed that Christ's death there was a vicarious sacrifice for sinners.

Local Churches Sunday School Lesson Christian Endeavor

5. Paul desired to see all men Christians. "I would to God that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost and altogether such as I am (Christians) accept these bonds." Seeking to save others is one of the surest signs that we are saved and are Christians.

His Only Vacation.

In Baltimore the Christian Endeavorers are greatly interested in the work of the Children's Fresh Air society. All of the societies contribute largely to its support, and many of the prominent city Endeavorers are officers in the society.

Some time ago a letter was received at the office of the society which is so good and so full of encouragement for the charity Christian worker that I want to pass it along. Here it is:

Inclosed please find $2 for the work of the Fresh Air society. I remember with much happiness that the only vacation I ever had as a child was given me by this society, and I want to send my mite now to help some other child to get a vacation. I hope the work may go on and that all the children may be sent to the country.

A FRESH AIR CHILD GROWN UP.
So seldom do we get any thanks for the work done among the poorer people, especially work of this kind, that it shows a healthful condition to get such a letter. And, my dear Endeavor friends, it just goes to prove that our Master does not let a single part of our labor spent in His service go without its return.—Alfred S. Day in Christian Endeavor World.

BENZOATE GETS ANOTHER BLOW

Dr. Bitting Sustains the Contention of the State in Catsup Making.

PRESERVATIVE UNNECESSARY

Testifies That the Benzoate of Soda
Brand Contained Quantities of Organisms.

Indianapolis, May 20.—Dr. A. W. Bitting of Lafayette, Ind., the expert who in 1907 was detailed by the U. S. Department of Agriculture to investigate the conditions of tomato catsup factories and the methods employed in the manufacture of commercial brands of catsup, for the purpose of determining just what necessity there might be for the use of Benzoate of Soda as a preservative in this commodity, is now on the stand for the defense in the Benzoate of Soda case being heard before U. S. Master in Chancery Daniels.

Dr. Bitting stated that his investigations had covered a period of nearly three years, during which time he had inspected some forty catsup factories and analyzed over 1500 bottles of catsup made by different manufacturers. As a result of these investigations and analyses, Dr. Bitting testified that he is convinced that the use of Benzoate of Soda is not only entirely unnecessary in the commercial manufacture of catsup and other food products, but it is a very undesirable ingredient of foods on account of the manufacturing abuses which its use makes possible.

This observation showed him, he further said, that Benzoate of Soda was being used principally at those factories where little or no regard was paid to the sanitary handling of the product. In support of this statement, Dr. Bitting exhibited to the court a number of photographs of unsightly and filthy factory surroundings, told of the refuse and decayed tomatoes which he had seen prepared as foods in these establishments, and said that these makers from necessity had to use a drug to preserve their product.

He also stated that his experiments had proved that Benzoate of Soda used in quantities of one-tenth of one per cent, which the Benzoate advocates claim is the maximum amount needed to preserve catsup, and which is usually printed on the label of their products, is not a sufficient quantity to prevent spoilage and that as a consequence he had found manufacturers using the drug in much greater amounts than they showed on their labels.

In the factories where Benzoate of Soda was being used the witness stated that he found they were generally more careless in the handling and preparation of their product than in those factories which did not use this drug. From this condition he was of the opinion that the discontinuance of the use of Benzoate of Soda in the food factories he visited was invariably followed by marked improvement in the manufacturing methods of these places.

"Where factories are clean and due regard is paid to the careful selection and sanitary handling of the raw materials, I find," said Dr. Bitting, "that the manufacturers have no difficulty in making a catsup that will keep without artificial preservatives."

This testimony is regarded by the defense as expert justification of their opposition to the use of Benzoate in foods, on the ethical grounds that no ingredient should be added to foods which can be made to conceal inferiority.

Boys and the Farm

An old farmer's two sons were anxious to leave the farm and work out their destiny in the city, says the Ohio State Journal. The farmer wanted to keep the boys on the farm. So he sent them to an agricultural college, one to learn plant breeding and general agriculture and the other to take a course in animal husbandry.

The result of this experiment was that each boy took a great fancy to his specialty and a great interest in the knowledge of it. The science of farming is very attractive. It lets one into a knowledge of the beautiful laws of nature, and gives a charm to all his work. This is the way to knock out the drudgery of farm life and give one broad views.

The agricultural college is today our greatest public institution. It takes much of the drudgery out of farm work by putting intelligence in it. The farmer is the real producer, the real benefactor in trade and commerce, and it is more sensible to encourage his development than that of any other class. There is no kindlier fortune for a boy than to get him interested in farm experience. He is pretty certain to attain to great worth.

Do You Open Your Mouth

Like a young bird and gulp down whatever food or medicine may be offered you? Or, do you want to know something of the composition and character of that which you take into your stomach whether as food or medicine?

Most intelligent and sensible people now-a-days insist on knowing what they employ whether as food or as medicine.

Dr. Pierce believes they have a perfect right to INSIST upon such knowledge. So he publishes, broadcast and on each bottle-wrapper, what his medicines are made of and verifies it under oath. This he feels he can well afford to do because the more the ingredients of which his medicines are made are studied and understood the more will their superior curative virtues be appreciated.

For the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses and derangements, giving rise to frequent headache, backache, dragging-down pain or distress and kindred symptoms of weakness, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a most efficient remedy. It is equally effective in giving strength to nursing mothers and in preparing the system of the expectant mother for baby's coming, thus rendering childbirth safe and comparatively painless. The "Favorite Prescription" is a most potent, strengthening tonic to the general system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. It is also a soothing and invigorating nerve and cures nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, chorea or St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing nervous symptoms attendant upon functional and organic diseases of the distinctly feminine organs.

A host of medical authorities of all the several schools of practice, recommend each of the several ingredients of which "Favorite Prescription" is made for the cure of the diseases for which it is claimed to be a cure. You may read what they say for yourself by sending a postal card request for a free booklet of extracts from the leading authorities, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post.

It's foolish and often dangerous to experiment with new or but slightly tested medicines—sometimes urged upon the afflicted as "just as good" or better than "Favorite Prescription." The dishonest dealer sometimes insists that he knows what the proffered substitute is made of, but you don't and it is decidedly for your interest that you should know what you are taking into your stomach and system expecting it to act as a curative. To him it's only a difference of profit. Therefore, insist on having Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

The New York senate has passed a bill prohibiting the use by prosecuting officers of confessions obtained from prisoners unless made in the presence of counsel. The measure is founded on a fundamental principle of the law, although there is a probability that it may be too far-reaching in its effect. When a man is arrested for a crime he is supposed to be innocent; it remains for the prosecuting officers to prove his guilt. Legally he should have counsel from the beginning and his cause should not be prejudiced by the zeal of the prosecuting officers. The action of the New York senate strikes at "the third degree," by which admissions often are forced from suspects. The purpose of the law is all right, says the Huntington Morning Times, but possibly it would serve justice better if it made some distinction between the voluntary confession and that forced from a suspect. Often a criminal, overwhelmed by his crime, will tell the truth and his confession really serves the ends of justice. But "the third degree," as a weapon of justice, is in disrepute. This is what the New York legislature condemns; it is a perversion of justice which everybody censures.

Painful Insurgency

The Troubles at Insurgent Headquarters in Richmond as Viewed by the Muncie Press

A few days ago Rudolph Leeds, publisher of the Richmond Palladium, cabled an invitation to Colonel Roosevelt at Copenhagen, Denmark, to attend the Richmond Fall Festival. This was done, it seems, without the knowledge or consent of the publisher of the Richmond Item, who is a close friend of Mr. Roosevelt. Hence a great editorial howl went up from the Item.

The Muncie Press, published by George B. Lockwood, with the vision of a crystal gazer, sees the scenes that are enacted at both ends—Copenhagen and Richmond—when the cablegram is received by Col. Roosevelt and the answer thereto is published "exclusively" and as a scoop by the Palladium, and describes the scenes and the strained situation at Richmond under the editorial head "Painful Insurgency," as follows:

Again are the insurgents in Wayne county insubordinating against the insurgents. No sooner had the mutual recriminations arising out of the contretemps, or should we not better say faub pas, of Connorsville ceased to trouble the aures of the populace which has its mouth kept open by the statesmanlike stunts of the literati of the uplift in the city whose conscience is exceeded only by the number of its saloons, than trouble breaks out in a new spot. The menace of the comet is forgotten, the frost that killed the quince crop drops out of the calendar of calamity, and all eyes are focused on the office of the Richmond Evening Item from the fretted dome of which proceeded at press time on Chuesday of this week sundry blood-curdling screams, soul-piercing shrieks and heart harrowing howls.

The sum and substance of the thing is this: Guillaume Dudleigh Pffonke has been on the job of holding the helm of the universe while the gentleman for whom he has been serving as temporary receiver of civilization has been putting a crimp in the fauna of the dark continent; he has been left alone, as it were, to keep the malefactors of great wealth from negotiating what little is left of the liberties of the people since Mr. Foulke was retired from the United States commission for the distribution of the lands of the Fodderhunter band of Indians. He has been standing there like Horatius at the Bridge of Cassabianca on the flaming deck or Maloney at the switch. There are one hundred and thirty-seven letters to Oyster Bay, L. I., beginning "Dearest" and signed "Dudley" and full of warnings, admonitions, confidences and eulogiums, written but still unmailed. While all this is happening a mere amateur in the work of insurgency, a "callow youth"—we quote the tear-stained editorial column of the Item—interferes, butts in, we were about to say, and cables an invitation to Colonel Roosevelt at Copenhagen—the town Dr. Cook made famous, inviting him—oh frightful profanation—to attend the annual boostival and pumpkin show of the city of Richmond. "Faugh" cries the viceregent of the Roosevelt dynasty—the profanity is awful—"Faugh," cries he, without thought as to whether or not his blasphemous words may deprive the Item of its second-class mail privileges. "Faugh—to make him an advertising adjunct to a fall festival or any other kind of a county fair—the thought is nauseating!"

Now, young Mr. Leeds, look what you have went and done. You have nauseated the ready letter writer. You have sent an invitation to our sainted leader, dated Richmond, Ind., without attaching to it the name of the Advisor General who sits at Richmond when he is in session. What an incredibleness! There may be other folks at Richmond according to the census, but there is only one Foulke, so far as the gentleman who had been pushing the point of his umbrella critically into the works of the old masters in the European art centers is concerned. Through the eyes of Editor Foulke we can see that scene of humiliation. Colonel Roosevelt, dressed in a faded khaki uniform well ventilated with eight saber cuts and fourteen bullet holes, trophies of the charge of San Juan, is shaking the hand that shook the hand of Dr. Cook. The king is dressed in a beautiful sky blue tunic cut on the bias, a pair of red tights with gold trimmings and a melancholy smile. He is surrounded by a bevy of courtiers in plug hats; by a skillful arrangement the bands and the fountains are playing at one and the same time. It reminds us of the scene at Brussels, just before the other man from Elba sent word that he had come to fight the battle of Waterloo, when

"All went merry as a marriage bell."

In the midst of all this, amidst the gleaming of shoulders, uniforms and teeth, just as the central figure in all this glow of haberdashery, crowns, coronets and conversations is about ready to open his mouth and drop a few dozen remarks that would for all time be treasured in the archives of the University of Copenhagen or some other national depository, enters an impudent messenger boy. He pulls out a little black book, sticks it under the nose of Mr. Roosevelt, arrogantly instructs him to sign, sticking a dirty digit on the indicated line, and demands ten cents for having to carry the message beyond the city limits. Still, the intrepid Colonel preserves an easy, careless air—it is doubtless a message from the Kaiser challenging him to a wrestling bout on the ramparts of the Budweiser palace, or an apology from the pope, or hugs and kisses from Gifford Pinchot. He opens it, a deadly pallor permeates his face, the yellow blank falls from his nerveless fingers, the court fool picks it up and reads in a loud, coarse voice, as follows:

Richmond, Ind., May 10.

"State terms one day stand this town October twelfth, Wayne county insurgent and pumpkin exhibition. Will show you in Floral Hall, admission two dollars; offer you thirty per cent gate receipts; fire works, grand band concert, exhibition by hook and ladder company; five hundred extra if you participate in grand sham battle at Glen Miller; one thousand more for a speech in court house yard putting Foulke in Ananias club."

Unwilling to further harrow up the feeling of Foulke we leave the signature blank. But gaze now upon the scene at Copenhagen. Ill concealed laughter loudly grates upon the horizon. The king puts his hand over his nose to hide a sneer. Snickering dukes, counts, earls, councilmen, revenue collectors and waterworks commissioners glide behind the priceless tapestry from behind which arises insulting eacinations. Such phrases as "pumpkin show," "fat hog exhibition" and "vas you ever at Richmond?" fly thither and hither, and occasionally you. The colonel calls for his horse. He hits an earl in the eye. He uses his boot on a master-of-the-hounds and hurls the shorter and uglier name at a lord chamberlain. He rides forth in the rain, bareheaded, uttering strange oaths. Here we leave him, for it would be useless to try to catch up with him.

And William Dudley knows that Theodore is wondering if his ready letter writer is asleep at the switch. Did he not leave him in full control of the situation in Indiana and does he not well know through Dudley's asserations that the whole Hoosier populace follows at the heels of Foulke? And how did Dudley happen to let them get one like this past him? The thought of that approaching interview at Oyster Bay is not assuring. Will this from the columns of the Richmond Item be deemed sufficient explanation?

"The editor of this paper had no knowledge of the cablegram sent with such secrecy to Copenhagen. Otherwise he would have done what he could to prevent as silly an act as ever was perpetrated by a band of callow youths."

Well, we shall see.

AN EASY AND HARMLESS WAY TO DARKEN THE HAIR.

Who does not know of the value of sage and sulphur for keeping the hair dark, soft, glossy and in good condition? As a matter of fact, sulphur is a natural element of hair, and a deficiency of it in the hair is held by many scalp specialists to be connected with loss of color and vitality of the hair. Unquestionably, there is no better remedy for hair and scalp troubles, especially premature grayness, than sage and sulphur, if properly prepared. The Wyeth Chemical Company, 71 Cortlandt St., New York City, put up an ideal preparation of this kind, called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur. It is sold by all leading druggists for 50c. and $1.00 a bottle, or is sent direct by the manufacturers upon receipt of price.

For sale and recommended by Hargrove & Mullin.

AMUSEMENTS

"The Salted Mine" is the title of the offering at the Vaudeville tonight. It is a western story of much interest, in which a young man from the east is the central figure. He goes west to seek his fortune, having heard the get-rich-quick stories and has many unique experiences. It is a typical story of the mines. Mr. Jones will sing a new illustrated song.

The Star Grand offers two subjects tonight. The first one, entitled "Carminella," is a story of the Lower East Side of New York, introducing scenes and characters of that famous neighborhood. The Bowery, Mulberry Bend Park and Fifth Avenue are portions of the scenic interest in the film. The second subject entitled "Accidents Will Happen" is a comedy which contains several good laughs. Earl Robertson will sing "Shaky Eyes."

The Palace theater will have a complete change of program tonight.

Instinct to Live

The instinct to live is deeply planted within us. The commandment says: "Honor thy father and thy mother that thy days may be long in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee." It is certainly commendable to live long, and it is within our power to prolong our lives. The infant that is killed by over or under care, or poisoned with impure milk or other unwholesome food, (cholera infantum) is not, of course, here considered. But under ordinary conditions, the ordinary person who has reached ten years of age, has only lived simply and frugally that his days may be long and his life a success. Dr. J. Marion Simms, America's great original surgeon, "The Evangelist of Healing to Women," said: "No man lives as long as he should; most of us die prematurely, even when we die in moderate old age, because we violate some law of hygiene, or perpetrate some seemingly unimportant act that lays the foundation of disease, which terminates in death." In our ill ventilated, unevenly warmed, insufficiently and wrongly lighted schoolhouses, impairments and defects of seemingly minor importance are forced upon children, and in consequence they die in early manhood or womanhood. But after all, it is wrong eating which destroys most lives. Stimulating foods, excessive amounts of food, fancy cooking, insufficient mastication, kill more people than alcohol, which is a poison whose victims cannot be counted. Eating should be a deliberate act. Even poor food deliberately eaten in reasonable amounts, is less injurious than good food, hastily eaten and washed down. Even the advertisers of nostrums for the cure of preventable diseases, tell us—"It is a well known fact that the close office life, the failure to secure a sufficient amount of sunshine and air, a thousand dietetic errors, to a fierce attack upon those long-suffering and patient organs, the stomach, liver, pancreas and intestines." Then the nostrum advertiser proceeds to tell us he has medicines which will cure all ills caused by our foolishness, and we buy them. Mark Twain somewhere says: "Nature has made man all right, he makes a fool of himself."

CHAPTER VIII.

"Hello! What's that?"

Startled out of his gargantuan slumber by the revolver's loud report, Howard sat up with a jump and rubbed his eyes. On the other side of the screen, concealed from his observation, there was a heavy crash of a body falling with a chair—then all was quiet.

Scared, not knowing where he was, Howard jumped to his feet. For a moment he stood still, trying to collect his senses. It was too dark to discern anything plainly, but he could dimly make out outlines of aesthetic furniture and bibelots. Ah, he remembered now! He was in Underwood's apartment.

Rubbing his eyes, he tried to recall how he came there, and slowly his befuddled brain began to work. He remembered that he needed $2,000, and that he had called on Robert Underwood to try and borrow the money. Yes, he recalled that perfectly well. Then he and Underwood got drinking and talking, and he had fallen asleep. He thought he had heard a woman's voice—a voice he knew. Perhaps that was only a dream. He must have been asleep some time, because the lights were out and, seemingly, everybody had gone to bed. He wondered what the noise which started him could have been. Suddenly he heard a groan. He listened intently, but all was still. The silence was uncanny.

Now thoroughly frightened, Howard cautiously groped his way about, trying to find the electric button. He had no idea what time it was. It must be very late. What an ass he was to drink so much! He wondered what Annie would say when he didn't return. He was a bound to let her sit up and worry like that. Well, this would be a lesson to him—it was the last time he'd ever touch a drop. Of course, he had promised her the same thing a hundred times before, but this time he meant it. His drinking was always getting him into some fool scrape or other.

He was gradually working his way along the room, when suddenly he stumbled over something on the floor. It was a man lying prostrate. Stooping, he recognized the figure.

"Why—it's Underwood!" he exclaimed.

At first he believed his classmate was asleep, yet considered it strange that he should have selected so uncomfortable a place. Then it occurred to him that he might be ill. Shaking him by the shoulder, he cried:

"Hey, Underwood, what's the matter?"

No response came from the prostrate figure. Howard stooped lower, to see better, and accidentally touching Underwood's face, found it clammy and wet. He held his hand up in the moonlight and saw that it was covered with blood. Horror-stricken, he cried:

"My God! He's bleeding—he's hurt!"

What had happened? An accident—or worse? Quickly he felt the man's pulse. It had ceased to beat. Underwood was dead.

For a moment Howard was too much overcome by his discovery to know what to think or do. What dreadful tragedy could have happened? Carefully groping along the mantelpiece, he at last found the electric button and turned on the light. There, stretched out on the floor, lay Underwood, with a bullet hole in his left temple, from which blood had flowed freely down on his full-dress shirt. It was a ghastly sight. The man's white, set face, covered with a crimson stream, made a repulsive spectacle. On the floor near the body was a highly polished revolver, still smoking.

Howard's first supposition was that burglars had entered the place and that Underwood had been killed while defending his property. He remembered now that in his drunken sleep he had heard voices in angry altercation. Yet why hadn't he called for assistance? Perhaps he had and he hadn't heard him.

He looked at the clock, and was surprised to find it was not yet midnight. He believed it was at least five o'clock in the morning. It was evident that Underwood had never gone to bed. The shooting had occurred either while the angry dispute was going on or after the unknown visitor had departed. The barrel of the revolver was still warm, showing that it could only have been discharged a few moments before. Suddenly it flashed upon him that Underwood might have committed suicide. But it was useless to stand there theorizing. Something must be done. He must alarm the hotel people or call the police. He felt himself turn hot and cold by turn as he realized the serious predicament in which he himself was placed. If he aroused the hotel people they would find him here alone with a dead man. Suspicion would at once be directed at him, and it might be very difficult for him to establish his innocence. Who would believe that he could have fallen asleep in a bed while a man killed himself in the same room? It sounded preposterous. The wisest course for him would be to get away before anybody came.

Quickly he picked up his hat and made for the door. Just as he was about to lay hand on the handle there was the click of a latchkey. Thus headed off, and not knowing what to do, he halted in painful suspense. The door opened and a man entered.

He looked as surprised to see Howard as the latter was to see him. He was clean-shaven and neatly dressed, yet did not look the gentleman. His appearance was rather that of a servant. All these details flashed before Howard's mind before he blurted out:

"Who the devil are you?"

The man looked astonished at the question and eyed his interlocutor closely, as if in doubt as to his identity. In a cockney accent he said loftily:

"I am Ferris, Mr. Underwood's man, sir." Suspiciously, he added: "Are you a friend of Mr. Underwood's, sir?"

He might well ask the question, for Howard's disheveled appearance and ghastly face, still distorted by terror, was anything but reassuring. Taken by surprise, Howard did not know what to say, and like most people questioned at a disadvantage, he answered foolishly:

"Matter? No. What makes you think anything is the matter?"

Brushing past the man, he added: "It's late. I'm going."

"Stop a minute!" cried the man servant. There was something in Howard's manner that he did not like. Passing quickly into the sitting room, he called out: "Stop a minute!" But Howard did not stop. Terror gave him wings and, without waiting for the elevator, he was already half way down the first staircase when he heard shouts behind him.

"Murder! Stop thief! Stop that man! Stop that man!"

There was a rush of feet and hum of voices, which made Howard run all the faster. He leaped down four

COMFORTING WORDS

Many a Rushville Household Will Find Them So.

To have the pains and aches of a bad back removed; to be entirely free from annoying, dangerous urinary disorders is enough to make any kidney sufferer grateful. To tell how this great change can be brought about will prove comforting words to hundreds of Rushville readers.

Mrs. Edward Green, Front & Warwick streets, Knightstown, Ind., says: "When I publicly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills in the spring of 1907, I did so knowing that they lived up to all the claims made for them. A member of the family suffered greatly from backache and other symptoms of disordered kidneys. When Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to our attention, a supply was produced and I must say that no remedy could have given greater satisfaction. A few days use of Doan's Kidney Pills convinced us of their curative powers and after the contents of two boxes had been taken, the backache and other symptoms of kidney trouble had disappeared. I recommend Doan's Kidney Pills at every opportunity and take pleasure in doing so."

steps at a time in his anxiety to get away. But it was no easy matter descending so many flights of stairs. It took him several minutes to reach the main floor.

By this time the whole hotel was aroused. Telephone calls had quickly warned the attendants, who had promptly sent for the police. By the time Howard reached the main entrance he was intercepted by a mob too numerous to resist.

Things certainly looked black for him. As he sat, white and trembling, under guard in a corner of the entrance hall, waiting for the arrival of the police, the valet breathlessly gave the sensational particulars to the rapidly growing crowd of curious on-lookers. He had taken his usual Sunday out and on returning home at midnight, as was his custom, he had let himself in with his latchkey. To his astonishment he had found this man, the prisoner, about to leave the premises. His manner and remarks were so peculiar that they at once aroused his suspicion. He hurried into the apartment and found his master lying dead on the floor in a pool of blood. In his hurry the assassin had dropped his revolver, which was lying near the corpse. As far as he could see, nothing had been taken from the apartment. Evidently the man was disturbed at his work and, when suddenly surprised, had made the bluff that he was calling on Mr. Underwood. They had got the right man, that was certain. He was caught red-handed, and in proof of what he said, the valet pointed to Howard's right hand, which was still covered with blood.

"How terrible!" exclaimed a woman bystander, averting her face. "So young, too!"

"It's all a mistake, I tell you. It's all a mistake," cried Howard, almost panic-stricken. "I'm a friend of Mr. Underwood's."

"Nice friend!" sneered an onlooker. "Tell that to the police," laughed another.

"Or to the marines!" cried a third. "It's the chair for his'n!" opined a fourth.

By this time the main entrance hall was crowded with people, tenants and passersby attracted by the unwonted commotion. A scandal in high life is always caviare to the sensation seeker. Everybody excitedly inquired of his neighbor:

"What is it? What's the matter?"

Presently the rattle of wheels was heard and a heavy vehicle driven furiously, drew up at the sidewalk with a jerk. It was the police patrol wagon, and in it were the captain of the precinct and a half dozen policemen and detectives. The crowd pushed forward to get a better view of the burly representatives of the law as, full of authority, they elbowed their way unceremoniously through the throng. Pointing to the leader, a big man in plain clothes, with a square, determined jaw and a bulldog face, they whispered one to another: "That's Capt. Clinton, chief of the precinct. He's a terror. It'll go hard with any prisoner he gets in his clutches!"

Followed by his uniformed myrmidons, the police official pushed his way to the corner where sat Howard, dazed and trembling, and still guarded by the valet and elevator boys.

"What's the matter here?" demanded the captain gruffly, and looking from Ferris to the white-faced Howard. The valet eagerly told his story:

"I came home at midnight, sir, and found my master, Mr. Robert Underwood, lying dead in the apartment, shot through the head." Pointing to Howard, he added: "This man was in the apartment trying to get away. You see his hand is still covered with blood."

ORDER MACHINERY.

(Greensburg Democrat.)

In a talk with the general promoters, William White and Dr. C. W. Pagel of the Bell Powder company, Tuesday evening, the writer was informed that the machinery for the manufacture of the Bell Smokeless Powder was ordered Monday and would arrive in thirty days and immediately placed in position for the manufacture of the product in or near St. Paul and that in sixty days they would be making several thousand pounds per day.

The company will give a gun shoot to be held in Greensburg on Thursday, June 2, at which time George M. Kanouse of St. Paul and Arthur Stewart of Sandusky will represent the Bell Powder company, using their product against any other branch of smokeless powder, the purpose to be a demonstration and test of its power, cleanliness and lesser recoil than other makes.

Don't Risk even a penny—until health returns. And I mean just exactly that.

I am the one physician who says to the sick, "I will, out of my own pocket, pay for your medicine if it fails to bring you help."

And for 20 years Dr. Shoop's medicines have London, May 20.—With bowed head and solemn countenance all England watched today the taking of the body of its deceased sovereign to its last resting place at Windsor. Edward VII. rests now near his mother, Queen Victoria, and his father who died two-score years ago. Today's ceremonious, mournful pageant, that marked the conveyance of the royal remains, was unsurpassed in recent history, rivaling in some respects surpassing that which saw the laying away nine years ago of the body of the great queen.

From Westminster hall, where the body of the sovereign had lain in state three days, to Paddington station and thence through the pleasant Middlesex country to Windsor, the route of the funeral procession passed through rows of somberly clad Englishmen, at- testing by their solemn demeanor the genuine sorrow they felt for the final passing of their king. It is a day of official mourning, to be sure, formally ordered by the dignitaries of the realm, but it is also a day of genuine heartfelt sorrow among the populace. In that respect it resembles more the February day of nine years ago when the last scene in the long drama of the life of Victoria the good was acted than those earlier days, of unhappy memory for England, when the people rejoiced almost openly over the death of some particularly scapegrace royal ty. As Victoria was mourned, so i her son. The twenty miles from Lon don to Windsor seemed to give forth an almost audible sigh as the train conveying Edward's body moved slowly to its destination.

Services Throughout the Kingdom.
Throughout the kingdom today solemn requiem services were held for the king. Not alone in the established church, of which he was the titular head, but in the Roman Catholic sanctuaries and in the Jewish synagogues

as well as in the churches of all shades of Protestant belief, crowds of worshippers paid religious respect to the sovereign's memory. It was the touching final tribute of the nation to the ruler who numbered Jew and gentile, Catholic and Protestant, among his personal friends. In virtually every church in the United Kingdom the services were held. The mourning of the nation is manifest not alone in the

of the people and in the solemn drapery of their houses, but also in their hearts.

The funeral procession in London was imposing and impressive in its size and solemnity. No less than seven ruling monarchs, besides King George, followed the bier of Britain's king, and other men, great, but uncrowned, shared with them the respectful attention of the populace.
Much of the attention was centered upon Theodore Roosevelt, special ambassador from the United States.

liam of Germany, showing in his stern face the tokens of recent and deep grief for the death of his uncle; the pathetically young King Manuel of Portugal, mourning the loss of the man who was to him more than to any other a wise counselor and friend; Alfonso of Spain; Albert, king of the Belgians, recalling to the people the recent death of his uncle and predecessor; Frederick of Denmark and George of Greece, brothers-in-law of the late monarch, and King Haakon of Norway, but recently ascended to the throne with the advice of his father-in-law, the late King Edward—all took part in the funeral cortege of the man who was greatest of them all in his lifetime. With them were Archduke Francis Ferdinand, the heir to the throne of Austria-Hungary; the Duke of Aosta, cousin to Italy's king; Grand Duke Michael, brother of the czar and cousin of the new king of England, and representatives of every minor king in Europe as well as men representing the republics of France and Switzerland. A figure that attracted much attention was Prince Fushimi, representative of the mikado, King Edward's ally. Probably never before in the history of Europe—certainly not since the funeral of Queen Victoria—have so many distinguished men, titled and untitled, been gathered together in one place. Many of them attended Queen Victoria's funeral.

The monarchs who attended the funeral rode on horseback behind the gun carriage which bore the remains of King Edward through the streets of London. They rode for the most part with bowed heads, giving little or no notice to the attention of the great throng gathered to see them pass.
Even their horses, pacing slowly and solemnly behind the casket, wore the insignia of mourning and seemed to feel that they were taking part in a solemn, mournful ceremony. The route of the funeral procession was crowded with Londoners and visitors from the provinces, many of whom had stood for hours waiting for the procession.

Shrewd proprietors of windows and places of vantage on the route had not permitted their public grief to interfere with their private gain, and seats from which the procession could be viewed commanded good prices. For some of them as much as 20 guineas had been paid, it was said.

Following the kings and princes on horseback came their female relatives in closed carriages. In the leading carriage was the bereaved queen mother with her unmarried daughter, Princess Victoria. The sight of the widowed queen's carriage, moving slowly in the procession, aroused the keenest sympathies of the loyal, silent crowd, and the silence was broken many times by the sobbing of the more emotional women members of the throng. The heart of England went out to Alexandra today, and it is reported that she has expressed her sense of the gratitude for the many signs of deep sympathy which she has received.

Great Military Ceremony.

The funeral was an imposing military ceremony, carried out with the strictest regard for all the minute details of military rule and tradition.
The earl marshal of England, his grace the Duke of Norfolk, was theoretically in charge, in accordance with the prerogative that invests him with command over all occasions of solemnity or splendor affecting the royal house, but the actual arrangements were put in the hands of the military authorities, with the duke's approval and advice. Troops lined the route of the procession, paying due honors to the body of the late commander in chief of the forces as it passed. Detachments of soldiers and sailors, thousands in number, accompanied the body from Westminster hall to Paddington station, and a guard of honor watched the splendid Windsor trees, before and after its deposition on board the funere-ally draped mourning train, on which the royalties and other high digni-taries also took passage for Windsor.

Throughout the mourning draperies one note of compliance with the wishes of the dead king was manifest. He de-tested deep black mourning of the usual sort, and in accordance with his wishes it was relieved today with a note of violet.

Last Services at Windsor.

Before the taking of the body from Westminster hall for removal to Windsor services were held in the hall, attended by the royalties and high dignities of the realm. The funeral services in St. George's chapel, the final resting place of the remains before their interment, were longer. The chapel is too small to accommodate all who attended the body from London to Westminster, and many had to remain outside. The carved stalls of the ancient and magnificent sanctuary had been removed to give place to long timber seats.

The arrival of the funeral train at Windsor was announced by the firing of minute guns. The roadway from the railroad station to St. George's chapel was lined with soldiers, who presented arms as the body of the king passed on its gun carriage. With solemn dirges the procession moved up the road, accompanied and followed by the officials whose hereditary and personal right it is to attend at the very last honors to be paid to a deceased British sovereign. There were the kings at arms, the heralds and the pursuivants, the lords in waiting, the lord chamberlain and the lord steward and a host of others.

The last touch of mediaevalism came when Sir Alfred Scott Scott-Gatty, as Garter king of arms and therefore chief heraldic officer of Great Britain, under the earl marshal, announced in solemn, ringing tones that the last earthly scene dealing with "this most excellent majesty Edward VII. by the grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British dominions beyond the seas king, defender of the faith, emperor of India," was dead.

fin saw fit to make another short talk. He again said that the committee was ever ready to do anything, but it was a question as to the scope of their work. He took exceptions to Mr. Parker's suggestion, that, if it was not stepping into the work of the factory committee, several committees be appointed to raise a permanent factory fund and arouse some interest. Mr. Guffin said that his committee could not be expected to go out and raise the money for the permanent factory fund and he did not think that they should be asked to do such a thing.

He then launched out on a speech supporting a permanent factory fund. Mr. Guffin stated that he had learned that it would take money to locate outside industries and the sooner the association did, the sooner they would progress. He advocated the permanent factory fund and that it be started at once. He said that nothing could be accomplished without it and without the united action of every member of the association. He believed that a general subscription should be made and that a permanent fund be established so that when the association went after a factory, they would have something to work on at once. Mr. Parker first suggested the permanent factory fund and also said that he believed that it should be raised with subscriptions, to be paid monthly. The discussion on the permanent factory fund lead to the call of the special meeting next Wednesday night, when the report from the executive and manufacturing committees on a plan for raising subscriptions to establish a permanent factory fund will be heard.

Jet Parker said that while it was asked that the newspapers of the city do something, it might be well for the members to thank them for what they had already done and the manner in which they assisted all that they should in boosting the association. He said that he believed that the press should be complimented for their assistance. Mr. Parker opened up the avenue for several members to express their admiration for the newspapers of the city in assisting the association in their work. President Cox said that the association should be thankful to the press for their work and he believed that they had done and were willing to do anything within their power for its good. He said that it was the most enthusiastic meeting which had ever been held, but the reason for it, he was not exactly certain as to that. Several other members took occasion at that time. Mr. Guffin included, to express their deep appreciation of the newspapers of the city in their efforts to promote the interests of the association.

H. G. Hackman had several ideas in regard to advertising, which he expressed. He said that the matter of automobiles carrying signs advertising Rushville and the association was one which he had long considered. He believed it would be a good plan for the association to have a few posters printed and given out to automobile owners. The matter was referred to the press committee. In another speech, Mr. Hackman said that he had always advocated the special sale for advertisement. He believed that a special sale by each merchant on Wednesday, for instance, would draw people to the city so that two Saturdays would come every week.

Dr. F. M. Sparks, as president of the Rushville Gun and Country club, made a short speech in which he said that the club would give to the association, free of charge, a page of advertising in the booklet which they are now issuing for their annual two day's tournament to be held next month. He said the booklet would go to all parts of the country and would be a big advertisement for the association. The members of the association gladly accepted the courtesy offered by the club.

The meeting was adjourned about ten o'clock with the earnest request that every member turn out next Wednesday night for the special meeting.

LIBRARIAN TO BE EMPLOYED

The meeting of the D. A. R. Thursday afternoon was one of unusual interest, it being the first one held since the rooms for the library and rest room were decided upon. The members discussed plans for the furnishing of the library and rest room, great enthusiasm and interest being shown. They hope to have the rooms open before many days.

By action of the society a cordial vote of thanks was extended to the board of commissioners of Rush county and to Orlando Randall, county superintendent, for granting the beautiful rooms for the use of a public library and rest room under the auspices of the D. A. R. Much praise was accorded these men.

It was decided to obtain the services of a competent librarian who will have entire charge of these rooms and books. The books and rooms are absolutely free for public use.

BUICK MODEL 10
June 19th

Was the day Louis Chevrolet got his Buick car all harnessed up. Loco, Knox, Stoddard, Apperson, Fiat and other cars were racing for the big Cobe Cup. Bill Mead timed Chevrolet a mile a minute, they say, with his Buick; all other cars he passed. Cyrus joined the crowd as they called aloud. Chevrolet made the grand-stand gasp. The women hollered, "Chevrolet's won," and the crowd yelled out as one, "I love my horse and wagon, but oh you Buick Car."
